

The Global X SuperDividend Emerging Markets ETF seeks to provide investment results that correspond generally to the price and yield performance, before fees and expenses, of the MSCI Emerging Markets Top 50 Dividend Index.

KEY FEATURES

High Income Potential

SDEM accesses 50 of the highest paying dividend stocks in MSCI Emerging Markets Index, potentially increasing a portfolio's yield and providing a monthly source of income.

Monthly Distributions

SDEM makes distributions on a monthly basis, providing a regular source of income for a portfolio.¹

Value with Growth

Investing in high dividend yielding securities in the emerging market space combines a value-oriented investment approach with exposure to markets that are expected to grow at a faster pace than developed markets.

¹There is no guarantee that dividends will be paid.

THE CASE

The Global X MSCI SuperDividend Emerging Markets ETF invests in 50 of the highest dividend yielding equities in the MSCI Emerging Markets Index.

Dividends Drive Returns

From 2008 through 2015, the MSCI Emerging Markets Index returned -36% on a price basis. Including returns from dividend reinvestment, however, resulted in returns of -21% over this same time period. The 16% difference over this time period demonstrates how dividends play a vital role in investor's returns. By investing in a fund with high dividend potential and reinvesting dividends, one can potentially achieve improved returns in sideways or even mildly bearish markets. (Source: Bloomberg, 2016)

Value With Growth

In March 2016, the MSCI Emerging Market Index had a forward P/E² of 12.5, while the MSCI World Index which includes large and mid-cap companies in developed markets had a forward P/E of 16.7. This shows a relative undervaluation of the emerging market space compared to the developed world.

Despite the cheaper valuations, emerging market economies are growing at a faster pace than their developed market peers. The average annual GDP growth rate in the past 5 years for emerging markets was 5.1%, compared to 1.7% for developed markets. Economists project that over the next 2 years, emerging markets will continue to enjoy annual growth in excess of 4%, while developed markets will grow at only 2%. Diversify Income Sources

Since 2011, emerging markets have demonstrated a correlation of 0.48 with the S&P 500 Index. For an income-oriented portfolio, including dividend payers from emerging markets can help diversify income sources across equity markets and interest rate regimes, potentially improving a portfolio's risk characteristics. HOW IT WORKS

1

Eligible emerging market equities must have:

- Primary listing in one of the eligible emerging markets
- Paid flat or increasing dividends in the past year.
- If dividend per share dropped by up to 10%, eligible securities must have increased or maintained their dividend payout ratio.

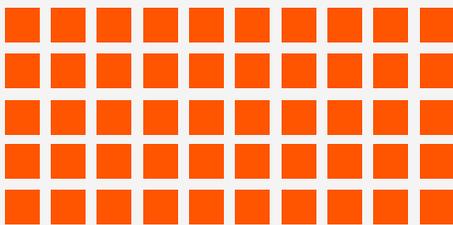

Eligible countries include:

Brazil	Czech Republic	Russia	China	Philippines
Chile	Egypt	South Africa	India	Taiwan
Colombia	Greece	Turkey	Indonesia	Thailand
Mexico	Hungary	United Arab Emirates	Korea
Peru	Poland	Qatar	Malaysia

2

On an annual basis, the index ranks eligible emerging market equities in the MSCI Emerging Markets Index by dividend yield. The 50 highest dividend yielding securities are selected and equal weighted in the index.

3

Components are weighted equally

² The price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio is a fundamental measure used to determine if an investment is valued properly. It compares the current price level of an equity security or basket of equity securities to its per-share earnings. All else being equal, a higher P/E ratio may indicate an asset is overvalued, while a lower P/E ratio may indicate the asset is undervalued.

Investing involves risk, including the possible loss of principal. International investments may involve risk of capital loss from unfavorable fluctuation in currency values, from differences in generally accepted accounting principles, or from economic or political instability in other nations. Emerging markets involve heightened risks related to the same factors as well as increased volatility and lower trading volume. There is no guarantee that dividends will be paid.
